A Community Garden in Racine

It's fun and rewarding to volunteer at the Garden of Giving. You will enjoy the camaraderie as much as the gardening. So, don't let another growing season go by, contact one of our Garden Coordinators and let them know that you are interested in volunteering—hundreds of hungry people will be glad you did.

Gardening with a purpose

We welcome individuals, families, corporate teams and community groups. You don't need to be a gardening expert to help us. Master Gardener Volunteers are always on-hand to provide direction and gardening advice. What we need are people who enjoy being outside and helping feed the hungry in our community.

UW-Extension provides a wide variety of workshops and training sessions in vegetable culture, organic growing methods, and other gardening topics to the public for free at The Teaching Garden is located at the Racine County Food Bank

Our Vision:

To build a diverse team of community volunteers and gardeners with a vision of improving the quality of life through the reduction of financial stress and food insecurity.

To harvest nutritious food and develop strong communities through the goods produced in a community-oriented garden.

To teach gardening using environmentally friendly, organic methods.
